

D I C E C N O

VI/02

journal of design culture
_S/D: Sign and Design

Disegno

JOURNAL OF DESIGN CULTURE

Double-blind peer-reviewed, open access scholarly journal

Editorial Board: VICTOR MARGOLIN, PROFESSOR EMERITUS: UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS (1941–2019)

Roy Brand, Associate Professor: Bezalel Academy of Arts and Design, Jerusalem

Loredana Di Lucchio, Professor: Sapienza University of Rome

Jessica Hemmings, Professor: University of Gothenburg

Lorenzo Imbesi, Professor: Sapienza University of Rome

Ágnes Kapitány, Professor Emerita: MOME Budapest

Gábor Kapitány, Honorary Professor: MOME Budapest

Viktor Malakuczi, Research Fellow: Sapienza University of Rome

György Endre Szőnyi, Professor: University of Szeged; Visiting Professor: CEU

Editors: Zsolt Gyenge, Olivér Horváth (Managing Editor), Szilvia Maróthy, Márton Szentpéteri, Péter Wunderlich (Project Manager). Founding Editor: Heni Fiáth

Graphic Design: Borka Skrapits

Copy Editing: William Potter

Aims and Scope

Disegno publishes original research papers, essays, and reviews on all aspects of design cultures. We understand the notion of design culture as resolutely broad: our aim is to freely discuss the designed environment as mutually intertwined strands of sociocultural products, practices, and discourses. This attitude traverses the disciplinary boundaries between art, design, and visual culture and is therefore open to all themes related to sociocultural creativity and innovation. Our post-disciplinary endeavour welcomes intellectual contributions from all members of different design cultures. Besides providing a lively platform for debating issues of design culture, our specific aim is to consolidate and enhance the emerging field of design culture studies in the Central European academia by providing criticism of fundamental biases and misleading cultural imprinting with respect to the field of design.

All research papers published in Disegno undergo a rigorous double-blind peer review process.
This journal does not charge APCs or submission charges.

Contact: Moholy-Nagy University of Art and Design
H-1121 Budapest, Zugligeti út 9–25.
disegno@mome.hu

The full content of Disegno can be accessed online: disegno.mome.hu

Published by: József Fülöp
Publisher: Moholy-Nagy University of Art and Design, 1121 Budapest, Zugligeti út 9–25.

ISSN: 2064-7778 (print) ISSN: 2416-156X (online)

Creative Commons License

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-ShareAlike 4.0 International License.

Contents

introduction

- 004 Márton Szentpéteri : Fabrica and Ratiocinatio. Introductory Notes on Design and Semiotics

obituary

- 008 Mary Angela Bock: Klaus Krippendorff (1932–2022)

research papers

- 012 Mihai Nadin: Design, Semiotics, Anticipation
- 042 Salvatore Zingale: Semiotic Processes and Design Processes. Inventiveness, Dialogue, Narrativity, Translation
- 060 Edit Újvári: Stone Pipe and Metal Container: Design Semiotic Analysis of Sacral Objects
- 074 Janka Csernák: Templates of Agency: Objects of a Social Design Program for Disadvantaged Girls
- 094 Erzsébet Hosszu: Everyday Objects in Trauma Therapy: Examining the Material Culture of Young Refugees with the Aim of Trauma Processing
- 114 Joana Meroz: Beyond Biontology? Bringing Elizabeth A. Povinelli's Geontologies to Life-Centred Design

essays

- 132 Aditya Nambissan: + or –. A Process-Oriented Guided Inquiry Learning (POGIL) in Design Education Using Semiotics as a Tool
- 148 Maressa Park: Designing the Dream Ballet: From Oklahoma!'s Third Auteur to Fish's Revival and Beyond

review

- 160 Julianna Bodó and Zoltán Biró A.: Ágnes Kapitány and Gábor Kapitány: A szimbolizáció. Hogyan cselekszünk szimbólumokkal?

- 164 about the authors

About the authors

Mary Angela Bock is an associate professor in the University of Texas at Austin School of Journalism and Media. She is a former journalist with an interest in photographic practice, the relationship between words and images, and social justice. She is particularly concerned with matters of truth and authenticity in the process of image production. Her current research examines the way citizen videos affect the public conversation about criminal and social justice in the U.S. Her latest book, Seeing Justice: Witnessing, Crime, and Punishment (Oxford, 2021) theorizes the relationship between media and the state in the production of visual representations of crime, the courts, and justice. Seeing Justice won the Diane S. Hope Book of the Year award from the National Communication Association's Visual Communication Division. Bock has written numerous other journal articles and books and she co-edited The Content Analysis Reader (Sage, 2009) with Klaus Krippendorff.

Mihai Nadin is professor emeritus of Computer Science and Interactive Media and former Ashbel Smith Professor at University of Texas at Dallas. He was distinguished fellow at the Hanse Institute for Advanced Studies and was involved with the University of Wuppertal and the Design Academy Eindhoven, among others. He holds an MA in philosophy and a PhD in aesthetics from the University of Bucharest, a PhD in electronics and computer science from the Polytechnic Institute of Bucharest, and a post-doctoral degree in philosophy, logic, and theory of science from the Ludwig Maximilian University, Munich. He advised Apple, Siemens, Sony, and many scientific bodies, and has authored numerous books and articles on the mind, visualisation, ubiquitous computing, and human-computer and human-technology interaction, introducing the terms “semiotic machine,” “the civilization of illiteracy,” and “anticipatory computing.” His recent research is focused on anticipation and dynamic systems, partly at the antÉ research institute at UT Dallas, which was founded by him.

Salvatore Zingale is Associate Professor at the Department of Design, Politecnico di Milano, where he also heads the Design and Otherness research project. He graduated with Umberto Eco at DAMS Bologna with a thesis on writing systems and poetry visualisation, and has since taught design and design semiotics, previously at ISA Monza. His fields include the role of interpretative activity in design processes; inventive processes; the visual dimension in design and communication, and the development of the dialogical aspects of design. Author of several scientific papers, his books include: Segni sui corpi e sugli oggetti (editor, with M.A. Bonfantini, 1999); Gioco, dialogo, design (2009); Interpretazione e progetto. Semiotica dell'inventiva (2012), Design e alterità. Conoscere l'Altro, pensare il Possibile (editor, 2022), and Relazioni dialogiche. Un'indagine sulla comunicazione e la progettualità (2023). He is the editor of the semiotics journal Ocula, and of the editorial board of FrancoAngeli's "Design della comunicazione" series.

Edít Újvári is habilitated associate professor at the Department of Cultural Studies at the University of Szeged, and co-chair of the Semiotics Working Committee of the Hungarian Academy of Sciences, and a member of the Budapest Workshop of Contemporary Semiotics. She is a lecturer at the Department for the Study of Religions, Faculty of Arts at the University of Szeged, where she teaches courses on Christian iconography, symbols and signs of religions, and cultural anthropology. She is the co-editor of Szimbólumtár (Encyclopedia of Symbols; Budapest: Balassi 1997) and Állatszimbólumtár (Encyclopedia of Animal Symbols. Budapest: Balassi 2017). Her academic research field includes visual semiotics, iconography, iconology and sign theories, on which she has published a book entitled "Jelet hagyni" Vizuális alkotások és rítusok szemiotikai elemzése ("Leaving a Sign": Semiotic Analysis of Rites and Works of Visual Art. Szeged: University of Szeged Press 2015)..

Erzsébet Hosszu graduated from Moholy-Nagy University of Art and Design in 2015 as an architect. In her first year at MOMÉ she joined some social architecture projects with Reflekt Studio, where they completed projects with rural Roma communities for two years. Ten years ago she co-founded Open Doors Hungary and since that she has been working with young refugees and asylum seekers as a creative facilitator and coordinator. Her goal is to support the development of underprivileged youth by introducing them to design process and creative thinking through practice-oriented methods like creative workshops and training. She is currently a DLA candidate at the Doctoral School of MOMÉ, where her research aims to understand the role of architecture in the place attachment of forced migrants, also to develop a creative tool for processing the trauma of losing one's home.

Janka Csernák is a social designer and researcher at the Social Design HUB of MOMÉ Innovation Center since 2020, currently working on her doctoral dissertation. Her track record as a market-based product and concept designer and curator for diverse audiences has informed her years of working in social design since 2015. Currently, her research focuses on the impact of design tools on disadvantaged women's communities and adolescent youth. In addition to teaching multidisciplinary social design courses in Zagreb (ALU), Gent (KASK), Tallinn (EKA), workshops during hackathons and summer universities, she is a co-founder of the Social Design Network. Her study "Development of disadvantaged female communities through design tools" was published in IDK2020, Interdisciplinary Doctoral Conference book, 9th Issue (2020). She received the Hungarian Design Award for several projects in 2014 and 2015, and the Fondation Jacques Rougerie Award in 2013.

Joana Meroz is assistant professor of Design Culture Studies at the Vrije Universiteit in Amsterdam. Her academic work has been published in The Design Journal, Dutch Crossing: Journal of Low Countries Studies, The Journal of Design History, Kunstforum, and Writing Visual Culture. She has also contributed chapters to Connected World Insights from 100 Academics on How to Build Better Connections (VU University Press, 2023); Exhibitions Beyond Boundaries: Transnational Exchanges through Art, Architecture, and Design 1945-1985 (Bloomsbury, 2022); Design Culture: Object and Approach (Bloomsbury, 2019); and The Routledge Companion to Design Studies (Routledge, 2016), among others. She is currently editing the book Design Culture Studies in the Anthropocene (Zazie Edições) and is a PI in the international research project Decolonising Sustainability Transitions Research in Practice (funded by the Amsterdam Sustainability Institute), and in Sustainable for Students, Staff, Society (funded by LEARN! Academy).

Aditya Nambissan graduated in Architecture from the Bangalore University and was associated with architectural firms like Mathew and Ghosh Architects in Bangalore (2015–2016) and Arijeet Raikar Design studio in Goa (2014–2015). He also worked as an Art Interpreter/ Art Mediator at India's Contemporary Art Biennale, the Kochi-Muziris Biennale (2016) and was actively involved in the production team. He was also involved in the 2021 London Design Biennale, assisting Nisha Mathew Ghosh (Curator of the India Pavilion). In 2017, he launched his independent architectural practice while teaching as an assistant professor at the Avani Institute of Design, Kerala. His teaching interests include building climatology, the exploration of architectural design studios, and developing design pedagogy for architectural education. Currently, at the University of Luxembourg, he is undertaking a master's programme and researches the challenges of climate change, resource scarcity, and social inequalities through the lens of architecture, urbanism, and territorial design.

Maressa Park is working at the University of Pennsylvania's Perelman School of Medicine as a communications specialist. She studied English, Linguistics, Creative Writing, and Asian American Studies at the University of Pennsylvania and the College of the Holy Cross. Her research interests include musical theatre evolution and cultural significance, innovation in storytelling, feminist analysis and psychoanalysis in performance, immersive theatre and audience participation, theatrical design and spatial dynamics, narrative adaptation and Broadway innovation, social commentary in theatre, memory and “post-memory” studies, and choreography as narrative language. She is also interested in exploring how visual culture, elements, and design convey meaning, ideology, and identity.

Julianna Bodó is a social researcher and professor in the Faculty of Economics, Socio-Human Sciences and Engineering at the Sapientia Hungarian University of Transylvania, Miercurea Ciuc, where she has taught since 2002. She has been involved in social research, publishing studies and editing publications since 1980. She obtained her PhD degree in 2004 from the Babeş-Bolyai University in Cluj-Napoca with a dissertation on the analysis of celebration practices. She is a founding member and colleague of WAC – Center for Regional and Anthropological Research, founded in 1990, in Miercurea Ciuc. Her research interests are cultural anthropology, media research, and analysis of symbolic events. She has conducted several research projects: the study of socialism celebration practices, research on symbolic use of space, analysis of interethnic relations, and analysis of the process of labour migration. She is co-author and author of several social science publications. She is member of scientific societies and journal editorial boards.

Zoltán Biró A. is a social researcher and professor in the Faculty of Economics, Socio-Human Sciences and Engineering at the Sapientia Hungarian University of Transylvania, Miercurea Ciuc, where he has taught since 2002. He has been involved in social research, publishing studies and editing publications since 1980. He obtained his PhD degree in 2004 from the Babeş-Bolyai University in Cluj-Napoca. He is a founding member and director of WAC – Center for Regional and Anthropological Research, founded in 1990, in Miercurea Ciuc. He is specialised in cultural anthropology, rural studies and media research. In the framework of WAC, he conducts social science research on the analysis of current social processes in Szeklerland. He is co-author and editor of several social science publications. Editor-in-chief of the journal Pro Scientia Ruralis. He has been an external member of the Hungarian Academy of Sciences since 2022.

